

Plan your path

If you have one or two years left in high school, now's a good time to start thinking about what degree you might pursue in university. Use this worksheet to identify which areas of study interest you at UBC and which courses you'll need to take in order to apply for your dream degree or degrees.

LEARN MORE

Find more information about UBC's general admission requirements, degree-specific requirements, and English Language Admission Standard — everything you need to plan your journey at UBC.

Step 1

Find your general admission requirements.

UBC's general admission requirements are based on where you're studying and your school's curriculum. Find your general admission requirements and list them below.

Step 2

Check out your program options.

Browse the list of program options available at UBC and list the ones that interest you below. Rank your top three program choices at the bottom, and indicate the corresponding degree for each one in step 3.

MY TOP 3 CHOICES

- 1
- 2
- 3

Step 3

Find your degree-specific admission requirements.

Select whether you're an international or Canadian student. Then, select the degree(s) you're interested in from the dropdown menu to find the admission requirements associated with that degree. List them below.

- 1
- 2
- 3

Step 4

Note the relevant subject categories for your degree(s) of interest.

Below the degree-specific admission requirements, under "Related courses," you'll find a list of subject categories that are particularly relevant for your degree(s) of interest. List them below.

- 1
- 2
- 3

Step 5

Find relevant courses at your school.

If your high school offers courses in the subject categories you noted in step 4, list them below as possible electives you might want to take.

- 1
- 2
- 3

